MOVIE NIGHT – SUNDAY – AUGUST 30TH – 6PMA NEW WORLD– BILLY GRAHAM DEVOTION

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. - 1 Corinthians 2:9

At the close of the Bible we encounter these words, “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away.” A new world is coming! Each time we pray in the Lord’s Prayer, “Thy kingdom come,” we should remember that that prayer will be answered. Heaven is described as a new creation in which we shall move in new bodies, possessed of new names, singing new songs, living in a new city, by a new form of government, and challenged by new prospects of eternity with social justice for all. The paradise that man lost will be regained, but it will be much more. It will not be the old one repaired, patched up, and made over. When God says, “Behold, I make all things new,” the emphasis is on all things. One day we shall live in a brand-new world. Centuries ago the apostles greeted each other with the word, “Maranatha”-the Lord is coming.

Prayer: Use me, Saviour, to hasten Maranatha, as I tell others that they, too, can be made new through Your divine love.

BENNY HINN, KENNETH COPELAND REVEAL THE ONE THING MORE POWERFUL

Benny Hinn delivered a deeply personal and reflective message during the Southwest Believers’ Convention, calling Christians back to what he described as the true source of spiritual transformation: an intimate relationship with Jesus through His Word and the person of the Holy Spirit.

“The power of God does not change the hearts of men,” Hinn declared. “Only the Holy Spirit changes the hearts of men.”

Hinn also reflected on the profound influence Kathryn Kuhlman had on his ministry. Recounting the first time he witnessed her services and later being asked to conduct her memorial service at just 24 years old, he described a defining moment when overwhelming fear left him unable to continue.

As he silently confessed to the Lord, "I cannot do it," Hinn said he sensed God answer, "I'm glad. Now I will." That experience, he said, forever taught him that God's greatest work begins where human strength ends.

Throughout the message, Hinn repeatedly urged believers not to seek God's power apart from knowing the Holy Spirit personally. "When you look for His power, you want to use Him," he said. "But when you look to Him, He will use you."

Hinn also spoke candidly about how reading through the Bible three times each year since 2012 has reshaped his own life. He said the discipline has deepened his love for Christ while increasing his sensitivity to anything that grieves the Holy Spirit, including bitterness, corrupt speech and unforgiveness.

His message ultimately centered on a simple but powerful reminder: genuine revival is sustained not by spectacular miracles alone, but by believers who daily pursue Jesus through His Word and the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit.

'THERE'S NOT A RIFT': HUCKABEE ON TRUMP AND NETANYAHU

This week, like many weeks, has been a tumultuous one in Israel. From reports of a split between President Trump and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to new security threats against Israel by Hamas and questions over what constitutes the disarming of the terror group, to the virtual collapse of Israel supporters in the Democratic Party.

Ambassador Huckabee was interviewed.

Regarding many reports of tension and a rift between Prime Minister Netanyahu and President Trump. You've been in the room with them. What's the story?

There's not a rift and I've been with them individually before or after the calls. There is honest conversation between two leaders who actually get along quite well. They don't agree all the time, on everything. But it doesn't mean that our relationship is shattered by the fact that we have enough, common ground that we can be honest with each other.

It's refreshing that you have two leaders who are personal enough in their relationship that they can be honest with each other. So the idea that they're mad at each other or that there's a split, I would just tell you, categorically, that's not true.

We're seeing an erosion of support for Israel, seeing it in the Democratic Party, in the DSA (Democratic Socialists of America), and some of the candidates that have won just in the last few days in the primaries. What's your concern about this rise of anti-Israel sentiment?

Well, first of all, it concerns me that it is a... real effort to deny a biblical connection; that's of concern to me as a believer. As a diplomat, my concern is that it is lacking context and it's lacking truth. Because for people to have this sense of "Israel doesn't matter," or that it's okay to be irrationally hateful toward Jewish people, that is... that is a concern because there is a very important thing that Americans tend to miss, and that is that Israel and America's relationship – it's about technology and military hardware and intelligence and all those things.

But more than any of that, it is about the shared values of a Judeo-Christian foundation upon which America was built. And without that foundation, there would never have been an America.

Antisemitism, Jew hatred, has risen exponentially since October 7th. What is your concern for the Jewish people in America and around the world? And how should evangelicals stand with Israel and the Jewish people right now?

I think it's the greatest anxiety that Jewish people should have right now is that everything that they thought would never happen again, and the cry after the Holocaust was "Never again." And here we are. We're seeing it again. And it's almost the same pattern. And the word anti-Semitic – I know we use it a lot. I've decided not to use it as much because I think people are numb to it and it just becomes this nebulous term. They really don't know what that means. I just use the term, it's Jew hatred, as you just did, because I feel like that's really what it comes down to, people hating Jews.

And if you ask yourself why, then you come to the conclusion it's irrational. But where do they get this? They get it from TikTok, and they get it from Twitter and Instagram. They get it from so-called influencers, many of whom are paid handsomely by foreign governments to present these messages. From bots that are created in foreign countries, whether it's Qatar, Russia, China, all to create division and consternation among younger people who don't have the frame of reference, who may not have the benefit of getting news from sources that are edited and carefully vetted. These are just sources that come from anywhere.

You've seen a lot here. You've seen war in Gaza, war with Iran. You've been in bomb shelters. Looking forward, what gives you hope?

My hope is built on something far bigger than any document that human beings could sign. And it's the document that God gave us, the Bible – His word. And when I read it, and I believe it to be not just true, but infallibly true – can't be amended, can't be changed. Can't be changed or altered. And that book is the solid rock on which I think we can all stand and say, well, you know, I don't know how things are going in the (middle) of the fourth quarter, but I know when the final whistle sounds, we come off this field victorious. And I'm okay with that.
